

EDITORIAL

The recent launch of Competitive Social Sciences Research Journal (CSSRJ) has been hailed with unexpected appreciation and acknowledgement by the academia, researchers, scholars etc. The journal is a peer reviewed journal which publishes both theoretical and applied studies on different aspects of social sciences. In this age of globalization which has resulted in close connections between communities, the research in social sciences has gained enormous importance. Our journal aims at providing a platform for academic discussion in social sciences and assist in publishing interdisciplinary content with international collaborations. The articles submitted to the journal undergo rigorous process of review both by national and international reviews with the purpose to assess and improve the quality of manuscripts. The journal urges the researchers, scholars, teachers and corporate professionals from across the globe to contribute to contemporary understanding of various social sciences disciplines. At this point, I would also like to extend my gratitude to the whole editorial and advisory team for their untiring efforts in making this venture possible and also to the scholars who have contributed their writings for the journals and helped the journal emerge as a big success.

Managing Editor